

10 UNITED STATES AMERICA,

No. CR 05-00216 WHA

11 Plaintiff,

12 v.

ORDER GRANTING MOTION
FOR TRANSFER13 LEROY E. FRITTS and RODERICK ALYN
14 PRESCOTT,

15 Defendants.

INTRODUCTION

16 In this tax-evasion case, defendant Roderick Prescott has moved for his trial to be 17 transferred for convenience to the District of Oregon. Leroy Fritts, the sole co-defendant, does 18 not object to his case also being transferred. The balance of factors on the motion tips in favor 19 of moving the case. The motion is GRANTED.

STATEMENT

20 MSSRs. Prescott and Fritts allegedly ran two businesses, National Trust Services and 21 Fountainhead Global Trust. Through National Trust Services the men supposedly sold advice 22 and services to help clients avoid federal taxes. Fountainhead Global Trust purportedly sold 23 offshore investments. The government claims that the National Trust Services scheme was to 24 create trusts through which clients would hold assets and funnel income. Defendants are not 25 charged, however, with any counts directly related to the possible unlawfulness of offering 26
27
28

1 these trust services. Instead, all of the charges against them relate to alleged evasion of their 2 personal federal income taxes, conspiracy to do so and alleged witness tampering by Mr. Fritts.

3 In 1998 and 1999, defendants purportedly earned income through these businesses.
4 They allegedly then sought to conceal it from the government via other trusts. Both men 5 allegedly failed to file tax returns for 1998 and 1999, either for themselves or for their trusts, 6 and to pay $333,098 in taxes, collectively. The tax evasion charges relate only to conduct in the 7 Northern District of California. The government, however, accuses the men of conspiring to 8 evade taxes both here and in other, unspecified, locations. The government accuses Mr. Fritts 9 of furthering this conspiracy by drawing income, in June and July of 1999, from checks drawn 10 on the National Trust Services account and payable to his wife, to a trust they created and to 11 another trust controlled by Mr. Prescott and his wife, Karla. MSSRs. Fritts and Prescott are 12 accused of causing their spouses to endorse those checks during that time.

13 Mr. Fritts allegedly sought to affect the testimony of Ms. Prescott, on July 20, 2004, in 14 the Northern District of California and elsewhere, thus violating 18 U.S.C. 1512(b)(witness 15 tampering).

16 The balance of facts relevant to the motion to transfer are described below because the 17 transfer analysis is inherently fact-intensive.

18 ANALYSIS

19 Mr. Prescott's counsel argues that Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 18 provides the 20 court with authority to transfer this case to another district for convenience reasons. He 21 misconstrues the rule. In fact, the rule's command that the "court must set the place of trial 22 within the district with due regard for the convenience of the defendant and the witnesses" 23 refers only to intradistrict — not interdistrict — transfers. See, e.g., United States v. Scholl, 24 166 F.3d 964, 969–70 (9th Cir. 1999) (transfer from Tucson, Ariz., to Phoenix, Ariz., both 25 within District of Arizona). Mr. Prescott's motion to transfer venue from the Northern District 26 of California to the District of Oregon on the authority of Rule 18 is therefore denied.

27 Upon a defendant's motion, however, criminal proceedings may be transferred to 28 another district "for the convenience of the parties and witnesses and in the interest of justice"

1 under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 21(b). Factors to balance in deciding such a motion 2 by a corporate defendant are: (1) location of the corporate defendant; (2) location of possible 3 witnesses; (3) location of events likely to be in issue; (4) location of documents and records 4 likely to be involved; (5) disruption of defendant's business unless the case is transferred; (6) 5 expense to the parties; (7) location of counsel; (8) relative accessibility of the place of trial; and 6 (9) docket conditions in each district involved. Platt v. Minn. Min. & Mfg. Co., 376 U.S. 240, 7 243–44 (1964). These factors have been adapted to trials of individuals. See, e.g., United 8 States v. Testa, 548 F.2d 847, 856–57 (9th Cir. 1977). This analysis is more defendant-friendly 9 than is the civil transfer rule under 28 U.S.C. 1404(a). For one, only the defendant can bring the 10 motion whereas either side can bring it civilly. Second, there is no presumption in criminal 11 cases in favor of the government's choice of forum. See Lou v. Belzberg, 834 F.2d 730, 739 12 (9th Cir. 1987) (deference to plaintiff's choice in civil case).

13 As to the first factor (location of the defendant), Mr. Prescott's counsel stated at the 14 hearing that his client lives in Orem, Utah, and this statement is consistent with the evidence.
15 Mr. Prescott also can stay for free with his wife, Karla, in Selma, Oregon (Hansen Aff. ¶¶ 4, 7, 16 Oct. 25, 2005; U.S. Supplemental Evid. Pursuant to Ct. Order, Exh. 2, Prescott Dep. 3, ll.
17 16–17). This order takes judicial notice of the facts that Orem is about 770 miles driving 18 distance from San Francisco and about 800 miles driving distance from Portland, Oregon (the 19 location of the nearest federal courthouse in that state). San Francisco is about 400 miles from 20 Selma. San Francisco is the closest venue to Mr. Prescott's home in Utah. If he were to move 21 to his wife's home, however, the closest federal courthouse would be in Oregon. There are 22 three divisional offices in the District of Oregon, each with a courthouse: Portland, Eugene and 23 Medford. The Medford courthouse does not have a federal district judge who works there on a 24 regular basis. Normally, this would preclude any felony trial from being held there. On the 25 Court's own motion, it has inquired of the District of Oregon whether a felony trial could be 26 held in Medford. The answer is that, on occasion and in appropriate circumstances only, felony 27 trials have been heard in the Medford courthouse. Medford is about fifty miles from Mr.
28 Prescott's free accommodations in Selma. Applying Rule 18, it appears that the most

1 convenient place for a trial upon transfer to the District of Oregon would be Medford. Eugene
2 is about 160 miles from Selma; Portland is 260 miles distant. Of course, the District of Oregon 3 will decide where the case will be heard and this order does not purport to influence the 4 eventual location of trial in Oregon.

5 Before this case, Mr. Fritts lived in Grants Pass, Oregon (Fermino Aff. 2). After his 6 arrest, he was ordered released upon posting of a $200,000 bond and satisfaction of other 7 conditions (Order Setting Release Conditions). No one has posted his bond since he was taken 8 into federal custody on August 3, 2005 (see U.S. Attorney, Northern District of California, 9 Three Former Bay Area Men Arrested in Connection with Tax Scams, at 10 http://www.usdoj.gov/usao/can/press/html/2005\_08\_04\_tax\_release.html (Aug. 4, 2005) 11 (arrested Aug. 3) (last viewed Dec. 5, 2005)). There is no reason to think that bond will be 12 posted now. The location of his residence therefore is of little to no importance in this analysis.
13 Wherever trial is held, Mr. Fritts probably will be in custody conveniently nearby.

14 Because Mr. Prescott could live conveniently near to the Medford courthouse but would 15 be at least 400 miles from San Francisco whether he stays in Selma or in Orem, the trial 16 location closest to his residence would be in Oregon. This factor therefore tips in favor of 17 transfer.

18 As to the second factor (location of possible witnesses), there are 20 potential defense 19 witnesses in Oregon. These include attorneys who worked with defendants, employees of 20 defendants' businesses and witnesses to allegedly unlawful actions by Mr. Fritts (Hansen Aff. ¶ 21 6, Oct. 25, 2005; Hansen Aff. ¶ 2, Dec. 1, 2005, Exh. A; Fermino Aff. 2). The government itself 22 lists eight potential witnesses living in Oregon. These are mostly the custodians of various 23 records (U.S. Supplemental Evid. 2–3). Defendants do not list anyone in California (see 24 Hansen Aff. ¶ 2, Dec. 1, 2005, Exh. A). The government lists sixteen witnesses in California, 25 one in Arizona and one in Utah. These include eight former clients of National Trust Services, 26 three IRS agents who have worked on cases against defendants, the custodian of records at IRS 27 operations in Fresno and one Department of Justice attorney who litigated a civil case against 28

1 Mr. Prescott. It is evident from other documents filed in this case that defendants had financial 2 relationships, either directly or through their businesses, with people throughout the United 3 States. A list of 281 individuals and entities who purchased services through National Trust 4 Services includes 117 listings for clients with addresses in California or Arizona, and twenty-5 four with addresses in the Pacific Northwest, Idaho or Montana. Dozens more were scattered 6 across the United States (U.S. Supplemental Evid. 2-3, Exh. 1, Brown Decl., Exh. H). There is 7 no suggestion by defendants or the government, however, that any of these people will have any 8 involvement in this prosecution (excepting the ones named in the potential witness lists).

9       Most of the expected witnesses are in Oregon. Not all witnesses, however, have equal 10 value in this venue-transfer analysis. IRS agents and the government attorney who are potential 11 witnesses are effectively part of the prosecution team. If they are still so employed, they will be 12 paid for their inconvenience. Furthermore, custodians of records sometimes are not called at 13 trial because the parties stipulate to the authenticity of and foundation for the records. Finally, 14 although the government has claimed that the clients of Messrs. Fritts and Prescott were cheated, 15 it has not shown how they will have any significant connection to this case, which does not 16 directly concern their businesses. The witness count favors Oregon over California by a tally of 17 28 to 16, even before discounting for former clients, custodians of records and government 18 employees. This factor therefore weighs in favor of transfer.

19       As to the third factor (location of events likely to be in issue), there are events both in 20 California and in Oregon. Many of these events involve defendants allegedly earning income 21 and hiding it from tax authorities.

22       Many relevant events occurred in California. National Trust Services was based in San 23 Jose or Foster City, and had a bank account in San Jose (Nat'l Trust Svcs., Bank Resolution 24 Minute, Brown Decl., Exh. D (San Jose headquarters); Prescott Dep. 28, ll. 5-10 (Foster City 25 headquarters)). The men held meetings at offices in San Jose to discuss the business 26 (Dobberstein Decl.). The declaration of trust was prepared by Mr. Fritts while he had an 27 address in Foster City (Nat'l Trust Svcs., Decl. of Trust at 1, Brown Decl., Exh. D). The Trust 28

1 also had an account with the Bank of Santa Clara, which presumably was in California, 2 although parties do not say so (Brown Decl. ¶ 40). The banks are important because much of 3 defendants' income passed through them. Both men had the authority to write checks on the 4 trust's bank account in San Jose. Mr. Prescott was authorized by the trust to borrow funds from 5 the San Jose bank for and on behalf of the trust (Nat'l Trust Svcs., Bank Resolution Minute).
6 On May 1, 1995, defendants allegedly established Fountainhead Global Trust in San Jose. Both 7 had signature authority on its bank account in Fremont (Dobberstein Decl.). In June and July of 8 1999, Mr. Fritts allegedly drew income from the National Trust Services' account.

9 The government claims that events at which defendants allegedly marketed their trust 10 services were held "primarily" in California from 1993–98 and that "most of the events at issue 11 occurred in California" (U.S. Supplemental Evid. 5–6). Of course, the only relevant years in 12 this case for the tax evasion charges are from 1998 to the present. The conspiracy, though, is 13 alleged to have begun in 1988 (Superceding Indictment 4). The marketing events are important 14 because it is through them that defendants apparently earned much of their income. They may 15 also demonstrate something about the ways they allegedly concealed their income.

16 Mr. Prescott claims that no such promotional events were in Northern California after 17 June 1998 and that the "vast majority" of such events took place in Oregon. In fact, he says that 18 "[f]rom 1998 to the end of 1999, [he] was located in Oregon and did everything in Oregon." He 19 then moved to San Diego and stayed there until August 2002, when he moved to Utah (Hansen 20 Aff. ¶ 3, Dec. 1, 2005; Hansen Aff. ¶¶ 3–4, Oct. 25, 2005). In Oregon, National Trust Services 21 had accounts at two banks (U.S. Supplemental Evid. 2; Brown Decl. ¶ 40). Mr. Prescott claims 22 that, because he lived in Oregon during that time, it is impossible that he evaded taxes in 23 Northern California. There is no ground for that assertion, as even his actions in Oregon could 24 have had effects here, such as by causing a check to be honored in an account here.

25 The record suggests that financial transactions occurred in both Oregon and California.
26 So did the marketing events. Over the course of the entire conspiracy period, there is no clear 27 center of gravity. Given that it seems most of the marketing events in 1998 and 1999 took place

1 in Oregon, most of defendants' income probably was earned there during the years for which 2 defendants allegedly did not pay taxes. Nevertheless, defendants are only charged with tax 3 evasion occurring in Northern California. There is no evidence on where the witness tampering 4 happened. Overall, this factor seems evenly balanced.

5 As to the fourth factor (location of documents and records likely to be involved), there 6 the Court is faced with dueling, largely unsupported claims. Counsel for Mr. Fritts claims that 7 most of the documents are in Oregon. Clearly, there are documents in Oregon, including court 8 records of litigation between defendants, bank papers and government documents (Fermino 9 Decl. 2; Hansen Aff. ¶ 12, Oct. 25, 2005). The government claims that most records are in the 10 Northern District of California, again including bank documents and IRS and other government 11 records (U.S. Supplemental Evid. 2, 3, 6). This factor does not tip clearly either way.

12 As to the fifth factor (disruption of defendant's business unless the case is transferred), 13 there is no evidence that either Mr. Prescott or Mr. Fritts has a business or a job. This factor 14 therefore does not tip in favor of transfer.

15 As to the sixth factor (expense to the parties), defense counsel has stated that cost is the 16 primary reason Mr. Prescott desires a transfer. Defendant states that transfer would be cheaper 17 for him because he has a free place to stay for himself and his witnesses, and free office space 18 for his attorney at his wife's home in Selma, Oregon. He also argues that transportation costs 19 for his witnesses would be less in Oregon because most live there (Hansen Aff. ¶¶ 6–11).
20 Counsel, who are in Las Vegas and San Francisco, would incur higher travel costs going to 21 Oregon than to San Francisco. Counsel have not submitted anything but the most conclusory 22 statements about the relative expense of accommodations in the various possible locations of 23 trial. They are therefore disregarded. In the end, it appears that trial in Oregon would be 24 significantly less expensive than trial in San Francisco. This factor therefore favors Oregon.

25 As to the seventh factor (location of counsel), Mr. Prescott's counsel is in Las Vegas and 26 the prosecutors are in San Francisco. David W. Fermino, counsel for Mr. Fritts, is with the 27 public defender's office here. If transfer is granted, however, Mr. Fritts almost certainly would

1 receive new counsel from the federal public defender's office in Oregon. In sum, counsel for 2 two of the three parties would ordinarily find trial more convenient in San Francisco but Mr.
3 Prescott's counsel is willing to be inconvenienced.

4 As to the eighth and ninth factors (relative accessibility of the place of trial and docket 5 conditions in each district involved), there has been no valuable evidence submitted. These 6 factors are therefore neutral.

7 In summary, only one of the factors favors keeping the trial here. It is location of 8 counsel. That is a relatively unimportant factor in this case. Three factors favor transfer and 9 they are all important: cost, location of witnesses and location of defendants. The other factors 10 are neutral.

11 CONCLUSION

12 The factors suggests that trial in the District of Oregon would be more convenient for 13 the parties and for the witnesses, on balance, and would be in the interests of justice. The 14 motion to transfer for convenience therefore is GRANTED. The Clerk shall certify the file and 15 transfer this entire case to the District of Oregon. All other motions pending before this Court 16 are therefore DENIED as moot. Counsel may be able to renew them in the District of Oregon.
